This educational day will feature an open forum for discussion on tough topics related to coping with a physical disability. Pediatric psychologists, Kinetic Kids staff, and community role models will be leading separate sessions for children and teens with physical disabilities, siblings of individuals with physical disabilities, and parents of children with physical disabilities. Each separate session will be led by a community role model who has a disability, a Kinetic Kids staff member, a child psychologist to facilitate discussion, and a member of Kinetic Kids' teen advisory board. Our goal is to help families and children with physical disabilities feel less alone, more informed, and allow families to share information.
